When I was young, I don't think there was ever any doubt in my mind about what job I intended to do for the rest of my life. However, I agree that it probably seemed a rather strange ambition for a child to want to be a politician rather than a footballer or astronaut. I'm quite sure that the person who was responsible for this was my grandfather. When he became the local Mayor, I was very impressed by the golden chains he wore!

2.2.

I inherited his love of debate and, apparently, even at primary school, I used to argue a lot with the teacher about school rules and fairness in the classroom. I remember one school report when she wrote that I had very strong views on a wide range of topics, and my parents got quite angry with me for not doing what the teacher told me.

| By the time I was a teenager, my parents were getting very worried about me. They wanted me to be a doctor, but I had no interest in this at all! In fact, the only thing I was interested in was reading newspapers, which was very odd for a young teenager! Then, I joined the UK Youth Parliament, and they realised that I was serious about becoming a politician.   |
| 2.4  |
| The UK Youth Parliament was very good training for me, and, some years after, I went on to be elected as a Member of Parliament for my own area. In the beginning, my parents were unhappy about my choice of career. They wanted me to choose a job which was well-paid with security, and it didn't help that my political beliefs were completely different from theirs! But I've been a politician for four years, and they're really happy now. |
| 2.5  |
| It's interesting how people react when I tell them that I'm an MP. Some think that I must be very caring and want to change the world, whereas others think that all politicians are rich and never tell the truth! I suppose politicians, in general, have a bad reputation, but I'm sure that young MPs, like me, really do want what is best for the people and our country. I hope   | so, anyway.

Located in Windlesham, Surrey, just south of London, is Updown Court, one of the most expensive houses in the world. This dwelling is the largest private home to be built in the UK for nearly 100 years, bigger even than the Queen's official London residence of Buckingham Palace. 28 miles from central London, the house is currently for sale.

The original Updown Court, built in the 1920s, was destroyed in a fire. The burnt-out house was bought by property developer, Leslie Allen-Vercoe and designed by American architect, John B Scholz, who designed many homes for the super-rich in the USA. It was designed to be the most opulent and extravagant house in the UK, with a level of luxury and attention to detail worthy of the £70 million price tag.

No expense has been spared. Nestling in the wooded countryside of Surrey, the house is approached via a heated marble drive. There is an underground garage with parking space for eight limosines and in the entrance hall there is a double-staircase, modelled on the one the late fashion designer, Gianni Versace had in his Miami mansion. It is estimated that a total of 25 tons of marble was used in the house, and in a downstairs study the floor is made of 24-carat gold-leaf.

You won't be short of space here either. The total of 103 rooms includes 24 bedrooms, 22 of which have en-suite bathrooms. In addition to the family accommodation there are two penthouse apartments on the top floor, one with a glass lift to take you to the infinity pool on the terrace. There are kitchens and storerooms, sauna, wine cellar, banqueting hall and a private cinema with 50 seats. If you like sport, there is a bowling alley, a squash court, floodlit tennis court and five swimming pools. Outside there is staff and guest accommodation, stables, and 58 acres of gardens, parkland and woods.

It will cost someone a fortune to buy Updown Court, but you will also need plenty of money to live there. It is estimated that heating the house alone will cost in excess of £250,000 a year. The security control room resembles something from a James Bond film. From it you can control the heating, air-conditioning, which can also be accessed via the Internet if the owner is travelling away from home.
